VOLUNTEER OF THE YEAR 2011

Robert Luttman has been selected by the Medfield Foundation as its Volunteer of the Year for 2011. The Medfield Foundation annually in the spring selects its volunteer of the year and youth volunteer of the year from amongst those suggestions submitted by Medfield residents.

Bob Luttman seemingly volunteers everywhere for everything in Medfield, reflecting a man with a passion and a great love for his community. He has raised the awareness of all the activities that Medfield has to offer, as well as special opportunities to serve, through his Monday Morning Medfield News email updates and website. Bob further encourages civic involvement through getting the word out to vote during town, state, and national elections. He has been instrumental in bringing about a chain reaction of volunteerism in the community through Community Connections Cafe and other endeavors. Bob has been both vocal and instrumental in keeping Medfield's musical history preserved through efforts to save Lowell Mason's house. He serves on the library trustees board, the town's technology study committee, Medfield Youth and Community Collaborative, and has been recently seen at Medfield Cares About Prevention. Bob was one of the founding directors of the Medfield Foundation.

The suggestion of Bob stated "When one arrives at a meeting and sees Bob is there, one knows one has a friend at the table. It seems that Bob is always an advocate on the best side of the issues to benefit the town. Although, Mr. Medfield might be more appropriate, Volunteer of the year sounds pretty good too!"
